DOE Hosting Online Event Friday with Industry on Restoring American Nuclear Energy Leadership

Washington, DC – Thursday, May 28, 2020 – Tomorrow, May 29, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), along with industry experts, is hosting an online event, “Trump Administration Strategy to Restore American Nuclear Energy Leadership: A DOE and Industry Discussion.”

Last month, the DOE released the Administration’s Nuclear Fuel Working Group \(NFWG\) Report, which outlines a Strategy to Restore American Nuclear Energy Leadership. ClearPath endorses the strategy to create new clean energy market opportunities.

“This strategy recognizes that a strong nuclear fuel supply industry will not exist without thriving, growing demand for that fuel, in the U.S. and abroad,” said Rich Powell, Executive Director of ClearPath Action. “The NFWG has laid out multiple policy options to restore the United States’ leadership in nuclear energy and technology -- while maintaining competitiveness against China and Russia.”

The event will feature special opening remarks from Energy Secretary Dan Brouillette, and will include the following participants:

- John Hamre, Ph.D., President and Chief Executive Officer, Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS)
- Rich Powell, Executive Director, ClearPath
- Maria Korsnick, Chief Executive Officer, Nuclear Energy Institute (NEI)
- Benjamin Reinke, Executive Director, Office of Policy, DOE
- Clarence “Bud” Albright, President and Chief Executive Officer, U.S. Nuclear Industry Council (U.S. NIC)
- Jon Indall, Counsel, Uranium Producers of America (UPA).

DOE Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Affairs Assistant Secretary Melissa Burnison and DOE Office of Nuclear Energy Assistant Secretary Dr. Rita Baranwal also will offer remarks.
